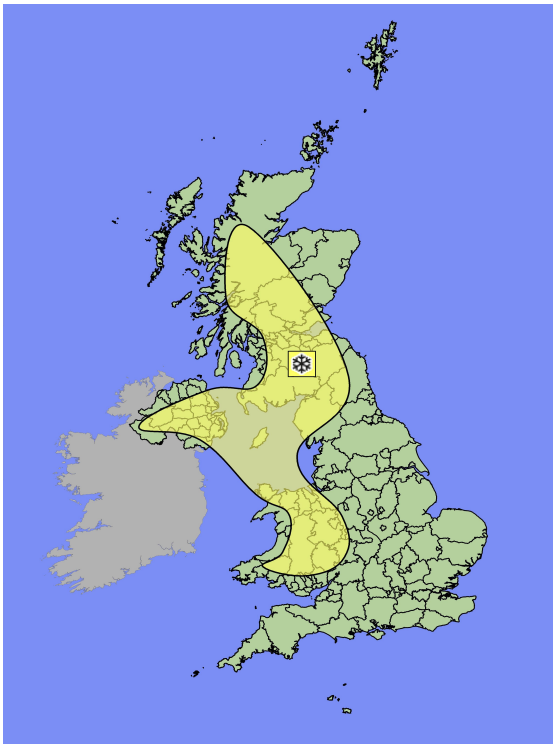
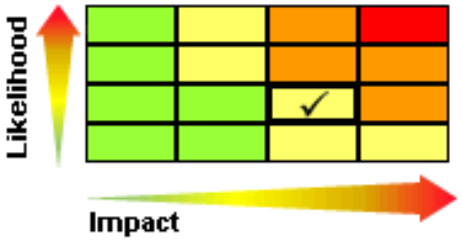
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Snow has fallen at some upland locations and will continue at times through this morning, although with a continuing decrease in wind.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow

Valid from 03:00 on Wed, 14th Dec 2011 until 10:00 on Wed, 14th Dec 2011

Heavy showers will fall as snow, chiefly in hilly areas above 200 m, but perhaps at times to low levels too. Accumulations of 5 cm or more are possible on hills, and there may also be some localised slushy accumulations at low levels. As a result some roads may become icy at times, with strong winds at first not helping the situation.

The public should be aware that travel over higher routes may be problematic.
